

The Role of Governance and International Law in the Style of Islamic Life; with the "Social Reform" Approach

Mohammad Kavyani Arani

Associate Professor, the Department of Psychology, Research Institute of Hawzah and University, Qom, Iran.

m_kavyani@rihu.ac.ir

Abstract

The aim of this study was discovering and explaining the role of governance and international law in the "Islamic lifestyle" with the approach of "social reform"; The question: How much and how do islamic governance and international law play a role in the life styles of people and society? Data collected with library method and field observation; Data analysis is carried out in a rational and theoretical form with the method of islamic studies; Some of the findings are: 1.The style of Islamic life can be considered in five scales, individual, family, social, governance and international; 2. These five scales are represented in concentric circles; 3. Governance and international law digest almost other circles within themselves; 4. Without Islamic rule , it is impossible to have a complete Islamic life style , even on an individual scale; 5. The will of the Islamic state must be expressed in the form of laws and regulations and institutions etc.

Keywords : Life Style, Islamic Life Style, Social Reform, Islamic Governance, International Relations, Islamic Psychology.