

Making a questionnaire of Comforting and Comfort Eliminating Factors of the Family in the Quran

Salman Nemati

Graduated with PhD in Quran and Psychology, Higher Education Complex of Islamic Humanities, Al-Mustafa Al-Alamiya Community, Qom, Iran, (Corresponding Author).

salman.n@chmail.ir

Massoud Janbzorgi

Professor of the Department of Psychology Muhammad Mehdi, Research Institute of Hawzeh and University, Qom, Iran.

psychjan@gmail.com

Mohammad Mehdi Safurai Parisi

Associate Professor Department of Psychology, Islamic Humanities Higher Education Complex, Al-Mustafa Al-Alamiya Community, Qom, Iran.

safurayi@gmail.com

Abstract

Research Aim: The aim of the present study was to design a model of sedative-depressant family factors in the Qur'an and to investigate its fit.

Research method: In this developmental study, mixed research method (qualitative-quantitative) and exploratory strategy were used. In the qualitative part of the research, content analysis method was used. Then, based on the identified factors, the conceptual model of the research was designed and a scale was prepared to measure the relaxing-relaxing factors of the family. Based on this model, it was prepared and validated. To evaluate the reliability of the questionnaire, the internal consistency method using Cronbach's alpha coefficient was used.

Findings: Data analysis in the qualitative part of the research led to the identification of 242 open source 53 sub-factors and 13 main factors as family peace factors. Cronbach's alpha coefficient in the experimental and final implementation stage was 0.88 and 0.98, respectively, and the alpha coefficient of 13 factors were all above 0.69 and for most factors was more than 0.80. The findings of the quantitative part of the study showed that the identified factors have a high and significant factor load and the obtained pattern shows a high fit to show the factors affecting family peace.

Conclusion: Factors affect the formation of family peace but have not been given the necessary attention. More attention to the calming and calming factors of the family based on Islamic culture is necessary for any action in the field of family.

Keywords: questionnaire- Family- Family Comfort Providing Factors - Family Comfort Eliminating Factors - Quran.